III. Dr. J. R. W. Dunbar read to the Convention a letter from Dr. Edrington, of Pittsburg, as follows :

PITTSBURG, May 26th, 1853.

GENTLEMEN :—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your circular, inviting my attendance on the approaching annual meeting of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland. It would afford me great pleasure to meet again with your highly respectable body, and to renew old and form new acquaintances. I must, however, forego that gratification for the present. I trust that your deliberations on the important question to come before your body may result most favorably for the interests of the profession. I shall regard it as a special favor to be furnished with an account of your proceedings.

I have, for several years, had it in contemplation to call your attention to a matter of special interest to the Faculty of Maryland. I allude to the claim of having first performed the operation of tying both carotid arteries. It may be unknown to many members of your society, as it was to the profession at large for more than twenty years, that this bold step in Surgery was first taken by a graduate of the University of Maryland, and a member of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, Dr. McGill, of Hagerstown. An account of the operation was published in some medical journal of New York, of ephemeral existence, and it would have been, probably, lost entirely to the profession but for the researches of Dr. Geo. W. Norris, of Philadelphia, who published a carefully prepared paper on this and kindred operations, in the July No. of the American Journal of Medical Sciences, for 1847. On the 37th page of that work, you will find the record of the fact that Dr. McGill performed the operation in 1823. At page 284, of the April No., 1846, of the same work, in a paper published by Dr. J. Mason Warren, reference is made to this operation, and Dr. Murphy is named as the first to have performed it in 1829. My attention was first called to this matter by reading Dr. Mott's Travels in the East, in which he canonized this as an American operation, and himself as the second to have performed it. He neglected to name the surgeon who led the way in this hazardous enterprize. I supposed until I met with Dr. Warren's paper, that Dr. Mott was aware that Dr. McGill was the first to have performed it. That satisfied me that either no account had been published, or that it had appeared in some journal of small circulation or of ephemeral existence. With a view to verify the history of this operation, I addressed a note to Dr. Hays, intending to assert Dr. McGill's claim. My communication was noticed in the News of June, 1847. This was the first published effort to vindicate Dr. McGill's connection with the operation. Dr. Norris' had, no doubt, been already prepared, as it appeared in the July No. of the Journal.

I feel now that I have fully discharged my duty to the memory of an early friend, once an ambitious aspirant for surgical honors, whose life, though short, was marked by this and other heroic efforts in his favorite branch of the profession. If the Faculty should deem it worth while to take any special notice of this interesting fact in the history of American Surgery, they will find the data in this communication, and possibly in tradition in the neighborhood in which it was performed. Dr. Norris could, most probably, name the journal in which the case was originally given to the public.

With kind regards to yourselves, individually, and to my old friends amongst you,

I am, gentlemen, very respectfully, yours, &c.,
(Signed,) E. G. EDRINGTON.

DRS. HINTZE, YEATES and DUNEAR, committee, Baltimore.

Davis, Charles O'Donovan, Wm. H. Medcalfe, J. P. Flemming, J. H. Turner, R. W. Brown, W. B. Crane, Stephen H. Weems, W. H. Clendinen, J. Lee Webster.

XXII. Wm. B. Crane, M. D., moved the following:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to publish the above resolutions, except the 4th, in the daily papers of this city.

XXIII. George W. Miltenberger, M. D., chairman of the committee on Dr. Hintze's resolutions, made a report, accompanied by the following resolutions:

1st. Resolved, That this Faculty strenuously advise, and urge upon the members of the profession of the State, the establishment of City and County District Associations, in accordance with the provisions of Article XIX, of our present By-Laws. That we will do all in our power to aid and further such organization, and that in order to the more speedy effecting of this purpose, a committee of _____ members be appointed for such city or county or district, whose duty it shall be, to convene the regular practitioners in their respective localities, for the purpose of organizing such local associations.

2d. Resolved, That in the city of Baltimore we have already had, in former time, such local association in successful operation, whose meetings were for several years objects of much interest to the profession, the regular practitioners of the city will assume that society, with its By-Laws, &c., with such modifications as may seem advisable, as the basis of our local organization, under the style and title of the Medico-Chirurgical Society of Baltimore.

3d. Resolved, That all such local associations shall be auxiliary and responsible to the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, and that as the basis of their organization, they be required to subscribe to, and be governed by, the code of ethics adopted by said Faculty.

4th. Resolved, That we strongly recommend the formation, particularly in the city of Baltimore, of minor and more limited associations, but voluntary in their constitutions, and established for purely scientific purposes, and that such associations be requested to bring the results of their labors before the State association, at its stated meetings, in such form and manner as may seem to them most advisable.

5th. Resolved, That a committee of _____ be appointed to ascertain the most effectual and economical means of publishing a concise sketch of such matters of interest, scientific, practical or ethical, as may, in future, be brought before us, with the amount of funds requisite, and the best mode of raising the necessary pecuniary means, in order that at the general meeting in November next, the Faculty may have it in their power to determine, in which, if in any manner, this purpose shall be carried into operation.

6th. Resolved, That in view of previous legislation upon the subject of medical protection, and the results which have almost invariably followed from all legislative interference with our professional position and privileges, this Faculty deem it inexpedient, impolitic and unwise to resort to any such means to improve their condition, and that they neither desire nor ask any protection, or assistance, from any extraneous source other than that, which the honest and honorable pursuit of a liberal and noble science will and must demand, and which the conscious discharge of their duties towards the community must of necessity insure.

XXIV. Wm. M. Kemp, M. D., moved the following :

Resolved, That the regular practitioners of the State be invited to attend the Convention of this Faculty in November next, as advisory members. Adopted.
